M-ROCK Announces EXTREME PointN'Shoot Camera Bags

*New Camera Bag Line by M-ROCK Features
EXTREME Protection, EXTREME Functionality and EXTREME Durability*

Las Vegas - March 9, 2007 - M-ROCK announces the addition of two compact digital point n' shoot camera bags, the Biscayne 501 and the Yosemite 502, to its M-ROCK EXTREME line of camera bags, introduced this week at the PMA Show in Las Vegas.

The M-ROCK EXTREME line now includes these two new vertical bags: the Biscayne can hold point n' shoot cameras up to one inch deep and the Yosemite can hold point n' shoot cameras up to 1.6 inches deep. Both bags also make excellent protection bags for camera cell phones, digital music players and many other small electronic devices.

The newly designed Biscayne 501 and Yosemite 502 are both compact and slim; however they offer an unusual amount of user-friendly features for camera bags in this size range, including:

- Soft lining and scratch free interiors
- Front panel with curved top exposes camera edge for easy accessibility
- Protective rain flap with secure front buckle and hook and loop closure
- Mesh pocket inside lid for storing two batteries
- Two slim front pockets for storing memory cards
- Shoulder strap with quality metal snap hooks that attach to D-rings on bag
- Handle and rear belt clip
- Compact design does not compromise bag's strength and durability
- Thicker padding protection than found with most bags in this size range
- Lifetime warranty to protect against defects in workmanship and materials with normal use of the bag
